EMPHASIZING

“Solidarity without borders for the PROTECTION of ALL CHILDREN globally”

AICET Council Details

We are a group of philanthropic specialists actively responding to the explosive growth of child exploitation online. Upon being asked to be a part of the AICET Council, we gave a resounding “yes”. Our children urgently need our help on a global basis.

Presentations are based on the Theory of Digital Supervision developed by Charlene Doak-Gebauer, the Founder and Chair of the AICET Council. All speakers contribute through their individual specialties as outlined in their biographies.

The Theory of Digital Supervision is divided into three parts – awareness, method, and hope. It was developed by Charlene to be a user-friendly approach to online child protection.

We believe in the safety of families and children online to the extent, we are donating our time. We request that travel expenses be covered. In addition -

- We ask that the hosting organization donate to a local charity within the hosting community with goals similar to ours, in the nation that is engaging us.
- In Canada, we ask for a donation to the Federal Canadian Charity Internet Sense First, which provides funding for victims of Internet child exploitation and education for parents, caregivers, and professionals about Digital Supervision.

Details about our presentations:

- Presentations can be half-day or full-day.
- Three to five speakers will be selected for presentations, based on location of venue, travel considerations, and contractual requirements.
- The AICET Council provides the speakers; venues do all arrangements, bookings, venue rentals, ticket sales, and other arrangement details.
- Attendees at full-day conferences are eligible for a Certificate of Completion for the Theory of Digital Supervision Training For Online Child Protection.
